About Us

JEM CiC (JEM) offers a range of services to support parents and our communities navigate the education landscape. This is in addition to the general information you will find on the website. We offer both general and bespoke services. Find out more below about how we deliver our services.

Advice

Your Rights and The Law
Contact Us
FAQ

We offer telephone and face to face advice on issues to do with exclusions and related matters.

We ask you to provide us with some general information, by completing our standard request for advice form, about your situation to help us understand what you want from our service and how you want to achieve it.

Advocacy

We advocate for parents in two ways depending on what you want.

Passive support - We sit beside you at meetings to do with your child while you argue your case. This can include advising you how to make representations at review meetings with governing body disciplinary committees (GBDC), independent review panels (IRPs), or writing letters to local authorities. Sometimes all parents need is someone by their side not to be their voice.

Active support - We speak on your behalf at meetings to do with your child. We seek to persuade and influence outcomes for your child using the law and or practical solutions. This includes representing your case at GBDC meetings, IRPs and in some cases the special educational needs tribunal. We collate and prepare the evidence for your case. We draft documents. Anything we do on your behalf will be with your agreement.

Training

We offer general and bespoke training on all exclusion and education related topics for community groups, governing bodies, schools, local authorities. Our training is practical and interactive. We don't recite the law, we explain it. We have provided training on the exclusions process up to and including making representations to GBDC and IRPs, SEND law and appealing to SEND Tribunals, elective home education to name a few.

Parent Forums

We regularly run forums for parents and community groups on topics they want to explore. Our forums give participants the chance to talk about their concerns, share knowledge and experiences. They encourage participants to knowledge share and bring people together, so they know they are not alone.
